the 1990s, the number of people who are employed in the service sector has increased in all countries.

There are two reasons why the service sector is growing. First, the service sector is becoming more important in the economy. Second, the service sector is becoming more important in the labour market.

The service sector is becoming more important in the economy because of the increasing demand for services. The service sector is also becoming more important in the labour market because of the increasing demand for service workers.
